Trams, the almost complete solution to Urban Pollution

National Air Quality Conference 12th November 2019

Venue: Lord's Cricket Ground,

London

The National Air Quality Conference serves as a platform for business, local authorities and the third sector to learn and network as an industry.

As the levels of toxic air being registered in our towns and cities increase and the numbers of deaths which are attributed to air pollution grow, there is a clear and perceptual change in mind-set with regard to delivering policies which offer quantifiable solutions across health, energy, urban design and transport.

The National Air Quality News Conference explores some of the issues and the possible solutions to the increasing levels of toxic air in our communities.

The conference agenda includes presentations from many sector leading specialists including:

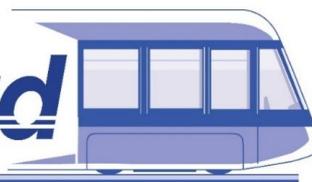

- Dr Gary Fuller from King's College London,
- Christopher Snelling from the Freight Transport Association,
- Simon Jeffrey from Centre for Cities,
- Dr Alison Cook from the British Lung Foundation
- Lucy Hayward-Speight, Delivery Planning Manager for Air Quality and Environment (TfL).

This meeting by invitation only, where MPs, Stakeholders etc. within the Light Rail industry and invited members of the Public will have a chance to discuss debate and raise questions concerning Light Rail & Trams.
