"The Test Case of Oxford"

This half-day symposium at Westminster, sponsored by the All Party Parliamentary Light Rail Group (APPLRG) will bring together the arguments and evidence for using light rail and trams to transform historic towns and cities in the UK where new housing is being built.

The test case of one of Britain's finest cities, Oxford, will be used to examine how the financial challenges can be resolved through sharing in the uplift in land values from development.

The symposium will be chaired jointly by Mr Iain Stewart, MP, Mr Daniel Zeichner MP and facilitated by Daniel Giblin of TramForward, and the results will be turned into a short report.

After a series of short presentations, an invited group of key stakeholders and transport experts will build a positive case that could form a prospectus for raising capital.
An agenda and list of invited speakers is attached

These meetings are by invitation only, where MPs, Stakeholders etc., within the Light Rail industry and invited members of the Public will have a chance to discuss debate and raise questions concerning Light Rail.
