Sydney LRT construction to start in October 2015

June 2015

THE detailed construction schedule for Sydney's CBD and South East light rail line was released on May 28, with major city centre works on the 12km route scheduled to start on October 23 2015.

On completion, services will operate from Circular Quay to both Randwick and Kingsford, operating every four minutes during peak hours on the shared section, providing an eight-minute interval service on the branches. Alstom will supply a fleet of 30 Citadis X05 low-floor LRVs, which will accommodate up to 450 passengers, the equivalent of nine standard buses. Deliveries will start in September 2017.

Mr Andrew Constance, minister for transport and Infrastructure, stressed the importance of recognising the challenge ahead, as well as the need for change.

"We've been elected to get on with the job of transforming NSW through major transport projects such as the North West Rail Link, Sydney Rapid Transit, WestConnex and NorthConnex and light rail in the Sydney CBD and Parramatta," says Constance.

This meeting by invitation only, where MPs, Stakeholders etc., within the Light Rail industry and invited members of the Public will have a chance to discuss debate and raise questions concerning Light Rail & Trams.
