Campaigning for Light Rail

This is a book from one of the LRTA's most prolific authors, who is also the author of "Bringing 'Metrolink' to Manchester", reviews a whole range of proposals for light rail from the early years of first-generation light rail to the present. There have been unfulfilled proposals and the possibility of intriguing proposals, but Tony Young has listed them all. He also covers the history of light rail waste relating to second-generation systems that ought not to be forgotten around Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool and South Hampshire.
